An existing 5,500 square foot building was renovated to accomodate a 22 bed- drug and alcohol rehabilitation facility in Boise, Idaho. The program allows patients to stay in the facility while learning to overcome their addictions. This space was designed to have one wing allocated for the treatment of male patients, and the other wing allocated for female patients. Dining and kitchen facilities, counseling offices, sleeping rooms, as well as a nurses station are all included to create an inclusive, safe treatment facility.

The site had to get conditional use approval from the City of Boise since it would be a space where patients would stay overnight. The use was approved due to factors such as supporting the physical health, mental health and providing social services to the residents of Boise.

Exquisite landscaping and new paint drastically improved the exterior of the building. Northpoint Recovery now has a comfortable and professional presence on Ustick Road.
